Acting hopeful leads class for youths

Teacher can identify with her students

By Paula Monarez

Mary Watson wants to be an actress.

For the past four years, the Glen Avon woman has auditioned for a number of parts in commercials, movies, television shows or music videos.

So far luck has eluded her.

Sure, she's been an extra on the "Burning Bed," "Back to School," "Cagney and Lacey" and other movies and television shows, but never a real speaking part.

People have told her she should give up.

"They tell me I'm never going to make it," the 20-year-old blonde said. "But I can't (quit). I am still too young. I think I can be a good actress."

However, this roadblock in her career has turned into something positive.

This month Watson will begin teaching acting to young children at the Upland Recreation Department.

The class will be held every Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon and is available to children from 9- to 14-years-old.

The youngsters will learn every aspect of the entertainment industry.

"We're going to have our own little crew, props people, costume people — the works," she said.

At the end of the 12-week course, the children are going to put on a play, which was written by Watson's sister.

The young woman hopes her students will learn to express themselves.

"Children are very unsure was the same way."

She also wants the children to learn that being an actor is not easy, she said.

But it shouldn't force anyone to give up. Because with a little luck and a lot of determination, they can succeed, she said.

Although she is nervous, Mary Watson believes students will learn much from her drama course.

As for the class, she hopes it's a hit, Watson said.

"I am very excited about the class," she said. "Even a little nervous. That's good because you know they say all good actresses get nervous before a performance." □

Lottery funds allow pupils to make Sacramento trip

By Marianne Aiken

About 150 Rancho Cucamonga Middle School students visited Sacramento in March, courtesy of the California Lottery.

The trip cost students nothing, but cost $106 per student in lottery money given to the Cucamonga School District.

"It was absolutely the neatest educational field trip they had ever had or hoped to have," said Principal Gerri Gordon. "It made their history class make sense. It brought the text books to life."

Different groups of 35-40 students arrived at school at 5 a.m. on four consecutive Mondays, boarded a bus, and caught 6:30 a.m. flights from Ontario International Airport.

The groups arrived in Sacramento at 7:30 a.m. for a tour of the Capitol and its historic sites.

At the Capitol, they met with Assemblyman Chuck Bader, R-Pomona, and Sen. Ruben Ayala, D-Chino.

Students "toured the Capitol, got to see the legislators in action, and were able to see how a law becomes a law, watching history in the making," Gordon said.

It took $68 million to restore the Capitol, which originally opened in 1869, Gordon said. The restoration was completed in 1982.

"A lot of the kids took pictures of the dome," Gordon said. "It's magnificent. It has marble floors, crystal chandeliers and a monumental staircase."

The students also saw some celebrities.

"(State schools chief) Bill

Honig was walking in front of us on our first trip," Gordon said. "One of our students, Richard Rogers, sat next to Chuck Bader on the plane March 9."

The students spent the morning at the Capitol, then they took a bus to Sutter's Fort, Sacramento's earliest settlement, dating back to 1839.

The students took self-guided audio tours of the exhibits, which demonstrate the lifestyle of California's earliest inhabitants.

After seeing how early settlers lived, many of the students were grateful to live in the 20th century, Gordon said.

"One of the kids commented they didn't have any conveniences, they didn't even have a dishwasher."

After Sutter's Fort, the groups went to Old Town Sacramento, to view its restored buildings and shops.

"Everything is authentic," Gordon said.

Part of Old Town is the Sacramento History Center, where students spent an hour on a guided tour.

The history center is the reconstructed Sacramento City Hall, a red brick building dating to 1854.

"It had interactive video stations where kids could walk around and participate in the history process," Gordon said.

One of the videos pits visitors against the Sacramento Valley flood alert, requiring them to handle the disaster.

Students ended up their day with a visit to the Railroad Museum of Sacramento.

locomotives and railroad cars, and 46 exhibits, Gordon said.

One of the exhibits is an old passenger car that moves as visitors walk through it.

"I came out here on a train when I was 6 years old, from Missouri, and that's exactly what it felt like," Gordon said.

Students arrived back at Ontario at 7 p.m. and were taken by bus from the airport back to the middle school.

The trip had an added sense of adventure for some of the students.

For 43 of the 150 students, it was their very first time on an airplane. □

Local students win awards in Write Side Up contest

Several local students with learning handicaps won awards at the Write Side Up, Celebration of Writing Activities Contest held March 14, at Chaffey Community College. Students entered their work in any of three categories: fiction, non-fiction and poetry. Nedra Volz, character actress of "Different Strokes" fame, presented the trophies and ribbons to excited students while a packed-house of proud parents applauded.

First place winners included Steven Forman and Scott L'Esperance of Stork School in Alta Loma. Second place ribbons went to Brandy Madison of Citrus School in Upland and Rachel Haas of Alta Loma School in Alta Loma. Third Place winners were Jimmy Guerrero and Allen Brock of Citrus School in Upland. Honorable Mention was awarded to Michael Davidson of Ontario High.

The contest is sponsored by the Pomona Valley Chapter of the California Association of Neurologically Handicapped Children, the Foothill Council of the International Reading Association, and the Foothill Association of Resource Specialists.

Rotary Club selects man for tour exchange team

The Rotary Club of Upland has named Leedert "Leo" Hordyk as one of five members of a vocational and cultural exchange team that will tour the Netherlands during April and May. The team, comprised of non-Rotarians between the ages of 25 and 35, will be hosted by Rotary Clubs in the Netherlands, and will tour and learn about business and cultural styles and traditions there.

Hordyk is coordinator of the information resource center for Von's Grocery company in the Los Angeles area and hopes to study the food marketing methods used in the Netherlands. He is a resident of Rancho Cucamonga, graduate of Alta Loma High School, and has worked for Von's since 1978.

A group study team from the Netherlands toured Southern California last year, and was hosted locally by members of the Upland, Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga and Chino Rotary Clubs. The program is world-wide in scope.

Council votes to provide funds for jail moving

By Mike Krapfl

Rancho Cucamonga city officials moved for the first time last week beyond vocal opposition to the county's plans for a jail in the city's downtown.

The City Council, acting as the Redevelopment Agency, approved the concept of providing the county with redevelopment money to build the controversial jail in another part of Rancho Cucamonga.

The approval, however, is preliminary. It only allows city officials to meet with the county to explore the possibility of redevelopment assistance.

Mayor Dennis Stout, speaking as chairman of the Redevelopment Agency, approved the concept by saying, "It's about time we started putting our money where our mouth is."

The city is officially opposing county plans to build an 800-bed jail near the intersection of Foothill Boulevard and Haven Avenue.

Because of the city's and residents' political pressure, county Supervisor Jon Mikels has pledged to try to move the jail from the growing city's downtown.

County officials have since pinpointed three alternate sites for the jail.

The sites, however, are being kept secret.

In order to be eligible for redevelopment assistance, the new jail site must be located between the Devore (15) Freeway and Etiwanda Avenue, according to a memo written by Rancho Cucamonga City Manager Lauren Wasserman.

Wasserman said last week he didn't know if the alternate sites the county is considering are located between the two roadways.

Even if the sites are, he said, the jail might not be eligible for redevelopment funding.

Because of the uncertainties, the Redevelopment Agency instructed Wasserman and his staff to investigate and report back to the agency.

Agency member Chuck Buquet said, "Since we've gone on record to oppose the site, it's our responsibility to explore other sites and other options."

Omnitrans board votes to shave 1988 budget

SAN BERNARDINO — Omnitrans' budget will total $18.8 million next year, some $555,000 less than the county bus system is spending this year, the agency's executive board agreed last week.

Large decreases in anticipated insurance costs and moves to make the system more efficient have allowed the agency to propose a budget reduction in the fiscal year beginning July 1, according to Finance Director Richard Teichert.

"It's a fairly conservative budget. I think we're in good shape," said Robert Chafin, Omnitrans' general manager.

The board voted unanimously to approve the operating and capital budgets.

At the same meeting, the board approved a marketing plan that includes the awarding of a contract allowing a firm to put up 25 bus shelters, complete with advertizing, at no cost to the agency.

The board also awarded a $575,940 contract to Contempo Coach Sales for the purchase of 20 paratransit vans.

Residents want homes to be turned around

By Mike Krapfl

Don Blunk says when he steps onto his manicured, northern Alta Loma lawn, he doesn't want to look across Carrari Avenue and see somebody's back yard junkpile between him and the mountains.

And so, Blunk and his neighbors are fighting City Hall.

"We want that tract turned around," he said of the homes that are to be built across the street from his single-story home and three-car garage.

The homes to be built directly north of Blunk will face the mountains, according to a plan recently approved by the Rancho Cucamonga Planning Commission.

Their back yards, therefore, will face Blunk and his five neighbors' front yards.

Brad McColl, who lives several houses east of Blunk, said the problem with that "is people tend to make back yards their dump and I don't want to have to look at that."

Nowhere else in the city, he said, is there a similar situation.

"And that's definitely going to impact our property values," McColl said.

Scott Murphy, a Rancho Cucamonga assistant planner, said he knew of no other place in the city where front yards face back yards.

Murphy, who is overseeing Friedman Homes' proposal to build 123 houses on the 84 acres north of Blunk's neighborhood, said he didn't know what effect, if any, the front yard/back yard placement might have on property values.

"I know," Blunk's fellow homeowner Pat Mulligan said. "They're certainly lowering our values by giving us back yards. This is certainly poor planning."

School plans Career Day

Carnelian Elementary School in Alta Loma will conduct its Career Day on Friday, April 24.

Speakers will discuss ways in which academic subjects directly relate to skills needed in the business world.

They will provide students with suggestions about careers that use subject matter studied in school and will discuss the types of responsibilities needed to advance in the work world.

Twenty-five representatives from local public safety agencies, doctors, nurses, lawyers, a florist, an architect, a banker and someone from an ambulance company will share their career tasks with students.

Target Stores grant $4,000 to museum/gallery

Target Stores, a division of Dayton Hudson Corporation, has approved a grant of $4,000 to the Rex W. Wignall Museum Gallery at Chaffey College.

According to Museum/Gallery Director Virginia Eaton, the grant will be used for a school outreach program conducted by the facility.

The outreach program will establish an introduction to the visual arts to be made available to schools through videotape, activity packets and school visits to the museum/gallery.

The grant monies will also be used to subsidize student transportation.

The project will be coordinated during three future exhibitions.

Park residents had to pay space hikes

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Residents of Upland Cascade Mobile Home Park had to pay their $75 a space rent increase no later than April 1 while they wait for an arbitration hearing.

Although originally scheduled for March 25, the hearing was rescheduled for Wednesday because the park owners' attorney Walter Talley objected to the first date.

In fact Talley hadn't informed the city as to whether he'd attend on the second date either.

"I'm not sure yet," the attorney for owner Newport

Pacific Capital Co. Inc. of Newport Beach said in a telephone interview last week.

His argument with the city stems from their different perceptions of the untried mobile home rent control ordinance passed into law a year and a half ago.

Talley said he wants a hearing based on the rules of the American Arbitration Association. He wants names of witnesses and points of issue ahead of time, he said.

"I guess what I want is a certain amount of fairness," he said. "It's very confusing. I'm not clear on those things."

But Upland City Attorney Don Maroney said that under city law, he does not have to provide Talley with such information.

"We don't have to be bound by any particular rules of arbitration," Maroney said. "He (the arbitrator) hears the arguments and he makes his decision. It's very simple."

Maroney said that Talley is needlessly complicating the procedure.

"What does he expect? A surprise witness with a smoking gun?" Maroney asked. "He's treating it like a criminal trial."

Meanwhile, because no agreement was reached before the scheduled rent increase April 1, the tenants had to go ahead and pay it, City Clerk Dee Carpenter said. The increase will be kept in a separate bank account and residents will be refunded if the arbitration results in a lower amount, she said.

Ray Coen, president of the park's homeowners association, said the mostly elderly residents are frustrated that an agreement was not reached before the rent increase.

"I'd say 99 percent of them are very upset, but there's nothing they can do about it. If they don't pay it they could be evicted," he said. "I think there are people in the park who cannot afford it. It's going to be a tremendous hardship."

The residents, represented by Upland attorney Charles

Psychotherapist: Students tries to get through to his peers with problems

Teens make best peer counselors

By Marianne Aiken

Teen-agers make the best counselors, said a psychotherapist who deals with teens who have drug problems.

"The best natural therapist in the world is a teen-ager," said Larry Lewis, a Pasadena-area therapist, "because you're going through so many emotions, you know exactly what you're feeling."

Lewis addressed a group of peer counselors from the Chaffey Joint Union High School District recently at a daylong drug abuse prevention conference sponsored by the Chaffey Against Substance Abuse program.

Lewis said peer counseling — teens helping other teens with their problems — is the best thing happening in local schools.

Every high school in the Chaffey district except Alta Loma has a peer counseling program, and Alta Loma will start one next year.

For a person to recover from a drug abuse problem — and in the area of abuse, there is no difference between alcohol and other drugs like cocaine — there first has to be a conversion experience, Lewis said.

"Conversion doesn't mean religion," Lewis said. "It finally clicks in your head that if you don't change, you're going to lose something you don't want to live without."

The two other components of recovery are making a decision to change and taking action: getting into a recovery program.

Substance abuse problems basically come down to intimacy problems, he said. "We put up walls, hate easily, separate from each other and demand our rights through violence."

In fighting drug abuse, teachers, counselors and parents need to experience themselves as being in a war, with the feelings of togetherness that war engenders.

Lewis told a story about a group of prisoners who escaped the death march in the Philippines during World War II. At one point the group crossed a deep ravine on a log. The cook, who was carrying all the group's food and pots and pans, slipped and fell, catching his foot in a knot hole in the log before falling into the 100-foot-deep ravine.

Still holding onto the food, he hung upside down over the ravine.

If he would have let go of the food, he could have pulled himself back up on the log. It was two hours before the group realized he was missing and returned for him.

When they asked him why he didn't drop the food, the cook said it was the only thing they had to eat.

It's that kind of group commitment that's needed to fight drug abuse, Lewis said.

Instead of leaving the decision to change up to the addict, peer counselors should get them into recovery programs and offer to take them to meetings of self-help groups, Lewis said.

"You have the opportunity to alter what's happening," he said.

Lewis said half the teen-agers he treats have one alcoholic parent.

"What you practice you become," he said.

He had some tough advice for teens and their parents.

"You have to hang with kids who aren't into heavy drugs," he said.

He told parents not to get angry when they get a call from the police or a teacher about their teen-ager.

"Take it as a conversion experience. Change your attitude."

Peter Wong deals with death and drugs every week.

It's part of his schoolwork.

Wong, 17, is a peer counselor at Chaffey High School.

He's one of a group of students who try to help other students get through school by talking out their problems on a one-to-one basis.

Peer counseling is becoming a trend in West Valley schools. Montclair, Ontario, Valley View and Etiwanda high schools also have peer counseling programs. Alta Loma High School will start one next fall.

Peer counselors help their classmates with everything from dealing with a death in the family to quitting smoking.

The peer counselors at Chaffey High School also venture out into junior high schools to ease the transition into high school for incoming ninth-graders, and work with handicapped students to help integrate them into society.

"Every student has their own unique problem, from drugs to attendance," Wong said.

Students come to the peer counselors either through a referral from a counselor or they can ask to see a peer counselor themselves.

Wong said his most difficult cases are those people who have conflicts not only with those around them, but within themselves.

"That's the hardest, helping them come around to their own solution to the problem," Wong said. "When we help them find the solution, they're afraid of the consequences."

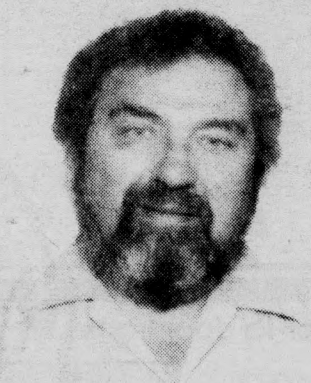

Wong said he's never had to deal with a student with a serious drug problem.

Most want to quit by the time they see a counselor.

"I try to get them to say what they think is right or wrong in their own minds."

When you purchase dowel rods you'll find that the diameters will vary slightly on dowels that are suppose to be the same diameter. Rather than try to sand these dowels down to the correct diameter get a number or letter drill bit that is closer to the dowel size. Letter and Number drill bits are made in smaller graduations than fractional bits.

To cut sandpaper discs to size keep a pair of dividers with one leg sharpened to a knife edge. Scribe the exact size needed on the back of the sheet and cut the disc free with one or two passes. These dividers can also be used to scribe wood.

So your wood will glide smoothly on the infeed table of your jointer put a thin coat of paraffin wax in the infeed table. Do not put wax on the outfeed table because if the wax sticks to the wood, later on when you glue up the glue won't stick to the wax.

Althouse, are pushing for the rent increase automatically allowed by city law, which amounts to about $7 per space, Coen said.

If Talley did fail to show up at Wednesday's hearing, Maroney said he will advise the tenants and their attorney to take the matter to the courthouse to seek an injunction against the park owners, the city attorney said.

"I don't intend to fool around with him any longer," Maroney said.

Talley, who was interrupted by a telephone call, could not be reached later for comment.

The park on the 1300 block of San Bernardino Road is the only one so far to take advantage of Upland's rent control law. That law prescribes that an arbitration hearing be held 30 days after an arbitrator is selected. Local arbitrator Lou Leisch was selected March 20, Maroney said.

Trash bills would jump for incinerator

By Patrick McGreevy

West Valley residents will initially pay approximately $1.25 more per month for trash collection to cover the cost of burning the garbage in a proposed Ontario incinerator, said the county's chief of landfill operations last week.

Max Buchanan's estimate is based on negotiations nearly completed with the waste-to-energy plant's builder, Ogden Martin Systems Inc.

Ogden Martin's president, David Sokol, said his firm and the county have reached agreement on all major points of a contract including the additional cost of dumping garbage at the Milliken Landfill incinerator.

The current $8.60-per-ton dumping fee charged to disposal companies at Milliken will increase to $18.60-per-ton when the plant becomes operational in 1990, Sokol said.

The dumping fee will gradually increase to $39 per ton by the end of the project's 25-year life, he told the executive board of the San Bernardino Associated Governments last week.

He told the board that without the incinerator, it will eventually cost between $50 and $100 to dump each ton of garbage because of the limited available landfill space.

Sokol said his company has agreed to pay all costs for developing the $150 million project. The county's only financial obligation would be to cover the incinerator's lost income if the county fails to provide 1,600 tons of garbage each day.

If built, the incinerator will burn 40 percent of the county's trash to produce electricity that would be sold to Southern California Edison Co.

Incinerators would worsen air pollution

By Andrew Horan

The 13 waste-to-energy incinerators under review in Southern California would worsen air pollution and induce cancers, according to a report by the regional smog control agency.

Taken together, emissions from the incinerators — including three such proposals in the Inland Empire — could cause pollution to exceed "safe" levels more frequently, lead to 17 extra cancer cases throughout the Southland during 70 years, reduce visibility and increase levels of acid rain and fog, the study found.

The plants would dump an extra 24 tons a day of six "criteria pollutants" into the air, according to the 36-page report.

Those pollutants — reactive organic gasses, oxides of nitrogen, oxides of sulfur, carbon monoxide, lead and particulates — combine to form photochemical smog and cause eye and breathing irritation.

But the study also asserted that smog control rules which require new firms to purchase pollution credits called offsets will reduce existing emissions enough to compensate for many of the incinerators' regional impacts.

"We know we're going to get the reductions somewhere," said John E. Grisinger, acting planning director for the South Coast Air Quality Management District.

AQMD rules require new manufacturers to purchase the credits from existing firms that pollute below their permitted levels.

While those offsets might reduce region-wide smog, Grisinger said the report indicates that the pollution credits will not reduce cancer-causing toxic pollutants in the immediate vicinity of those plants — such as the Milliken Landfill in Ontario, Garb Oil in Rialto and the Spadra Landfill in Pomona.

Virginia Fields, a Riverside resident who leads Clean Air Now, said the offset rule is ineffective now and will not reduce impacts.

"I don't believe the offset program is working now ... much less on anything new," she said.

In response to the report, the group plans to ask the AQMD governing board to impose a moratorium on waste-to-energy plants until the district adopts rules to control toxic emissions.

AQMD now regulates criteria pollutant emissions — but not toxics — in non-desert areas of San Bernardino, Riverside, Los Angeles and Orange counties.

The AQMD report also suggests that building the 13 planned incinerators — another 12 more have been proposed — might increase acid rain and fog in the basin and cause 17 cancer cases over a 70-year period.

In addition, the report found that utilities may not need the power expected to be generated by the incinerators.

Burning the estimated 16,000 tons of garbage a day might "provide power beyond the region's needs ... which could result in an increase in emissions," according to the report.

The incinerators have been proposed as a solution to keeping rapidly filling landfills open while providing an alternative energy source.

Most incinerator opponents have called on county waste management agencies to begin source separation recycling to help extend the landfills, reduce toxic pollutants and conserve energy.

The AQMD report supported recycling and said such measures could cut pollution in direct proportion to the amount of material not burned.

Regardless, the report concluded that no matter "how waste is managed ... disposal will contribute significant emissions in both the near- and short-term."

Planning commissions deal with less

By Kimberly Heinrichs

More than a year has passed since the Upland Planning Commission became one member short.

But city officials said the empty seat hasn't made much of a difference for the six-member board.

"It's just that you like to have a seventh member for as much community input as possible,"

Chairman William Daily said.

The opposite appears true in Rancho Cucamonga, where efforts to fill a vacancy began immediately after the seat became open in March. Part of Rancho Cucamonga's urgency is that without a new member it would only have four commissioners at its next meeting, said City Planner Brad Buller.

"When we're short we have four which is an even number," Buller said. "It's definitely a concern because a tie means an automatic denial."

While Upland's missing space leaves its commission an even six members, there has not been a tie vote since the space opened in December 1985, Planning Director Jeff Bloom said.

Mayor Richard Anderson, in charge of selecting the new commissioner, pointed out that seat now open is not the one originally vacant. Two other positions have been vacated and two filled during that time, he said.

Anderson said that part of the delay has been his investigation into whether a smaller, five-member board would be more suitable. Since at least one member of the commission is often absent, the mayor said he has had a chance to study the commission with five members.

Although he was pleased with the result of more efficiency, he said members of the Planning Commission and at least one council member pushed to keep the 7-member board.

Rancho Cucamonga's deadline for commission applications was Friday and the city had received about 12

West Valley quickly closing gap between new jobs, residents

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — The West Valley is rapidly closing the gap between the number of new jobs created and arrival of new residents, the county's director of community development last week.

However, the gap is growing in the rest of the county, Tom Laurin told the county Board of Supervisors.

Laurin's comments were made at a workshop held by the supervisors to consider how to improve the county's efforts to attract new businesses.

They voted two weeks ago to consolidate Laurin's department with the economic development program run by a private firm under a $353,064-per-year contract.

"I think that by the merger we're going to have created a much better mechanism to promote economic development in the county and create jobs to address that (current) imbalance," said Board Chairman John Joyner after the workshop.

A report on the effect of the consolidation and recommendations for additional changes will be prepared by the supervisors in June, Joyner said.

Currently, the population in most of the county is growing faster than the job base, Laurin said. The negative effect of that imbalance is that residents have to commute longer distances out of their communities to work.

One recent study estimated that throughout Southern California, 43 new jobs are created for every 100 new residents moving into the area. In San Bernardino County, 35 new jobs are created for every 100 new residents, said Ray Resendez, the county's deputy director of development and finance.

The West Valley is the exception to that imbalance, he said.

"The growth in industry is outpacing the growth in housing development in the West End. In the East Valley it's the opposite," he said.

Joe White, whose Pathfinder company holds the county contract for economic development, defended the job his firm has done in bringing new businesses into the county.

In the 2½ years since Pathfinder was hired, the firm has brought into the county 47 companies which are employing more than 10,000 workers and have made more than $330 million in capital investments in the county.

White said the cost to the county through his contract has turned out to be $45 for every job created and $1 for every $100 increase in property tax revenue generated by the new firms.

"There's also the cost of some criticism that's going to come about why you are spending this money in this manner," White told the supervisors. He praised them for having the "courage" to support the economic development contract.

However, county officials say one of the things the current assessment study will consider is whether there are more efficient or economical methods of promoting development in the county.

Joyner told his fellow supervisors Monday that the consolidated new economic development program will have to better define what industries are appropriate for each community. The new program will also have to do a better job of coordinating its effort with the planning department.

The program must also do a better job of measuring how successful it is, Joyner added.

Pitzer College students make symbolic gesture

By Betsy Brady

Pitzer College students deflated a giant mushroom cloud balloon sculpture last Thursday in a symbolic gesture to wipe out the threat of a nuclear holocaust.

The mushroom cloud sculpture standing five stories tall and 50 feet wide was erected earlier in the morning on the north end of campus and caught the attention of joggers, students and motorists passing by the campus.

Created by Los Angeles artist Lee Waisler, the mushroom cloud was designed to focus attention on the need for arms control among the world superpowers.

The sculpture was erected in conjunction with a one-day conference on arms control and the implications of the Strategic Defense Initiative, better known as Star Wars.

Since President Reagan proposed the Star Wars concept in 1983, scientists have been developing a system to destroy Soviet missiles before the missiles hit the United States.

Four California Institute of Technology graduate students in a panel discussion on the Claremont campus said the SDI is too costly and implausible.

"When we hear optimistic stories about deploying a shield against nuclear weapons, the shuttle story should serve as a warning," said Peter Gray, referring to the 1986 Challenger shuttle explosion.

Computer scientist Craig Steele said the number of warheads are very large — estimating 50,000 in the future — while the time for a laser to reach a deployed missile is small.

In addition, he said, a space-based system would be vulnerable to direct attack from the Soviets as well as computer software errors.

"The basic problem is whether you can trust the system," he said.

Following the scientists' panel discussion, college professors from Claremont McKenna College and a Los Angeles Times reporter discussed the political implications of Star Wars.

The conference, sponsored by Pitzer and Harvey Mudd College, concluded with a lecture by Sidney Drell, a consultant to the National Security Council and the U.S. Arms Control Disarmament Agency.

their classmates who have drug problems to anonymous self-help programs.

Accountability is sometimes a problem, Wong said.

"That situation is difficult because you don't know if what they say they'll do is what they'll do," he said. "I just try to do the best I can based upon what they tell me."

The peer counselors at Chaffey High see their clients one day a week for one class period. They might see two or three clients in that time, said Cathi Creeden, a Chaffey High government and economics teacher who's in charge of the peer counseling program.

Creeden said one of the biggest functions of the peer counseling program is to decrease the school's drop-out rate. Ron Scott, the Chaffey Joint Union High School District's director of child welfare and attendance, said he reported to state officials that Chaffey High School's drop-out rate is 11 to 12 percent. That figure is probably too low, he said.

Peer counselor Jim Kokkinias said he asks students who are thinking of dropping out what they plan to do after they leave school.

"One client asked me to do a role-play, to act like his father so he could see how his father would react," Kokkinias said.

The counselors sometimes strike attendance contracts with their classmates.

The contract technique is also used with students who want to quit smoking through the Peers Urging Freedom From Smoking program. More than half the students who participate in the PUFFS program cut down, said 17-year-old peer counselor Kim Dominguez, and 25 percent quit. PUFFS is a once-a-week program that meets for four weeks. It's now in its third session.

Aretha Maddox, 18, said she recently counseled an eighth-grader who was afraid to start high school next year.

"I explained what my view of Chaffey was," Maddox said. "There's no line there you can't cross or you'll get beat up."

The junior high students also want information about clubs and sports.

The peer counselors visit junior highs to instill a sense of school spirit in future students before they reach high school.

Sales tax jump for road, freeway building backed

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — The county's representative on the California Transportation Commission last week endorsed the concept of increasing the county's sales tax to finance freeway and road construction.

Bill Leonard also revealed that Riverside County has declined his invitation to join San Bernardino County in seeking a half-cent increase in the sales tax on the November ballot.

"Apparently, some feel over there that they're not quite ready for it," Leonard told the executive board of the San Bernardino Associated Governments.

Leonard said the state commission welcomes any local funding of transportation projects because of the lack of state and federal funding.

"The commission needs help," he told the board. He praised those counties that are increasing their sales tax, calling them "self-help" counties.

The commission is considering a program to reward those counties that raise local funding, possibly by giving them priority in the allocation of state and federal funds, Leonard said.

Rancho Cucamonga City Councilman Chuck Buquet, a member of the SANBAG board, sought a guarantee that the state would reward "self-help" counties with priority in funding.

Foothill court's cafeteria to open within a month

By Mike Krapfl

One of the last of many delays that have plagued the Foothill Communities Law and Justice Center is nearly over, the county's deputy administrative officer said Wednesday.

The center's cafeteria should be opening within a month, John Giblin said.

"It's about time," said Marti Foster, a Superior Court deputy clerk in the Rancho Cucamonga courthouse.

Foster, whose desk is within 50 feet of the cafeteria's locked doors, said she wants to use the facility, but was skeptical it would open soon.

"We've had so many opening dates mentioned for this and that," she said, "I don't think anybody pays attention to them anymore."

The center, which houses the West Valley's superior courts and will house municipal courts, opened in December.

The opening was more than a year late.

The cafeteria was supposed to open when the center opened.

Giblin said the cafeteria's opening has been delayed "because of problems with the contractor."

When asked to be more specific, he said, "I'm not going to discuss possible litigation in the newspaper."

The county has alleged that the courthouse's architect, HMC Architects of Ontario, was responsible for delays, according to court documents.

Giblin also said Kitcor Corporation in Sun Valley and Orange County's Electrend Inc. are responsible for delays in the cafeteria's opening.

He said Kitcor was responsible for installing the cafeteria's kitchen equipment and Electrend was responsible for the center's electrical wiring.

Kent Kitchen, Kitcor's vice president, said, "There's no reason that cafeteria shouldn't be open."

"It's finished as far as we're concerned," he said.

The cafeteria's kitchen does appear to be complete.

The rest of the room, however, is a dusty mess of stacked tables, chairs, electrical equipment and boxes.

Bob Osborne, who was working for Electrend at the time the company wired the Law and Justice Center, said the electrical equipment is not his company's.

"We've completed our work and the county has checked it all off," he said.

applications, Buller said. A council-appointed subcommittee would narrow down the selections to four or fewer applicants, who will be interviewed by the entire council, he said.

In Upland, Anderson is sole responsible for interviews and makes a recommendation to his council, he said. The mayor said he has conducted 12 interviews in the past year and plans to make a selection by May.

Local architect John Grow, one of those interviewed by Anderson, has found Upland's system frustrating. After meeting with Anderson last summer he has heard nothing, Grow said.

"He (Anderson) didn't give me enough basis to walk away, feeling either turned down or accepted," he said.

Anderson said that no one is officially out of the running despite the long delay. Because of the importance of the position, he said the city will not set deadlines to fill it.

New charge filed against association

By Marianne Aiken

A state board has filed another unfair practice complaint against the union representing teachers in seven West Valley high schools.

It is the second such complaint against the union by the Public Employment Relations Board.

The complaint stems from an election last year in which a majority of the teachers of the Chaffey Joint Union High School District voted that non-union teachers should have to pay a fee for their representation by the union.

The most recent complaint, dated March 2, relates to how union fees were collected from teachers after the election, alleging that the union did not take steps to ensure that the money was not used for political purposes.

Associated Chaffey Teachers President Maryellen Hill said she hadn't yet been served with the complaint.

"It's not a legal charge if it hasn't been served," she said.

Hill said the $41.30 monthly fee deducted from teacher paychecks since Oct. 1 has not been used for political purposes.

The complaint also alleges ACT failed to identify and verify its expenditures and failed to provide a reasonably prompt decision by an impartial decision-maker on any challenge to the amounts collected.

Hill also denied those charges.

"They did provide for an escrowing of the money," she said. "The California Teachers Association furnished a breakdown of the budget as pertains to agency fee."

However, a teacher who belongs to a group challenging the election said the budget breakdown took place during meetings over the past three months in Burlingame, a Northern California city. The meetings were too far away for local teachers to attend, said Alta Loma High School teacher JoAnn Henkel.

"There's no way we can attend those meetings," Henkel said. "That would be irresponsible."

The books of the local union were not disclosed in the meetings, Henkel said.

According to a U.S. Supreme Court decision, the union fees of non-union teachers can only be used for costs related to collective bargaining, contract administration and grievance adjustment.

Speed blamed for jump in fatal traffic accidents

Rancho Cucamonga neighborhoods aware of problem

By Mike Krapfl

Residents of one Rancho Cucamonga neighborhood say they know what's causing a sharp increase in fatal traffic accidents on the city's streets this year: speed.

Week before last Rancho Cucamonga city and sheriff's officials told The Daily Report they couldn't explain this year's record rate of fatal traffic accidents in Rancho Cucamonga.

So far, six people have been killed in traffic accidents on the growing city's streets. Last year, a record 14 people were killed.

Richard Loken, a resident of Alta Loma's foothills, said "there's got to be a common link (between these accidents), and that's speed."

Loken, who lives high above the West Valley on Amethyst Street, said, "Everybody in this neighborhood I've spoken to is interested in one way or another in slowing down this street."

Loken said he'd also like to see the traffic traveling down Beryl and Carnelian streets and Hellman Avenue slowed down.

So he and some neighbors asked the city to put stop signs down the length of the thoroughfares.

City officials, however, recently denied the request.

Paul Rougeau, Rancho Cucamonga's traffic engineer, said the proposal was denied because the streets' traffic volumes aren't large enough to warrant signs.

He also said stop signs aren't an effective speed control.

"Sure, (the signs) slow people down at intersections," he said. "But in between the signs traffic gets back up to the same speed."

Sgt. Ron Ufkes, the sheriff's deputy in charge of traffic control in Rancho Cucamonga, agreed that signs aren't an effective means of controlling speeders.

Even if they were, he said, that wouldn't stop the kind of accidents that have bloodied the streets of Rancho Cucamonga this year.

Three of this year's traffic deaths, he said, were caused by people who drove through stop signs.

Ufkes did, however, acknowledge that speeding drivers are a problem in Rancho Cucamonga.

"This city is built to encourage speed," he said.

"When you travel to the freeway from the top of Haven or these other streets," he said, "it's a downhill shot all the way."

To try to slow the speeders, deputies are patrolling a target area one day each week, looking for speeders, tailgaters and unregistered vehicles, Ufkes said.

"I'm no traffic expert," Loken said. "But I can see if more isn't done to stop drivers like the one who hit my son's car, one of our children will definitely be killed on this street."

School PTA bestows service honors

The Jasper School PTA of Alta Loma presented Honorary Service Awards to a teacher and two custodians recently.

Myrtle Whisenand, a second-grade teacher who came to Jasper in 1976 when the school opened, will retire in June.

Jim Baker, a custodian, has been at Jasper since 1979. He helps with school activities and is also active in the Cucamonga Lions Club.

Frank Zazueta, also a custodian, has been at Jasper since 1978.

Regional planners stop short of opposing train

By Andrew Horan

Regional planners last week stopped short of rejecting a proposed Las Vegas to Ontario super-speed train proposal until proponents answer eight critical questions.

Rather than vote to oppose the $2.5 billion project, the group "took a position to forward some comments to the city of Las Vegas," said Al Bowser, principal transportation planner for the Southern California Association of Governments.

Most of those comments focus on points of contention raised by West Valley politicians who oppose the train, calling it "the gambler's special" because they fear it will be a drain on the local economy.

Bowser said the letter sent to Las Vegas officials will ask if economic benefits might be more evenly spread between Southern California and the Nevada city.

A SCAG report released last week predicted up to $985 in annual Southland consumer spending could be lost to Las Vegas if the 229-mile, 250 mph train is built.

Bowser said SCAG also wants to know "to what extent the project can help alleviate traffic problems forecast for Southern California ... by adding additional terminals" to the one planned near the San Bernardino (10) and Devore (15) freeways interchange.

The earlier SCAG report indicated the train would draw enough traffic to require one extra lane in each direction on the San Bernardino Freeway.

Bowser said SCAG also is worried by studies that "appear to indicate (the proposal would cause) a 9 percent to 17 percent increase in air pollution levels over today" in the Ontario area.

of themselves at that age," she said. "I know because I Rancho Cucamonga City Planner Brad Buller disagreed.

If the two tracts face each other, Buller said, the new homes will block Blunk's view of the mountains and increase traffic on his isolated street.

Buller also said the approved plan requires less grading and will keep the two tracts' architectural differences from clashing.

Buller said the city has responded to the residents' concerns by requiring a six-foot wall, additional landscaping and an extra-wide equestrian trail to be built between the older homes' front yards and the new homes' back yards.

"That should make for a very pleasant north side of the street," he said.

Blunk and his neighbors, however, aren't satisfied.

"All we want is some guarantees that mobile homes or junked cars aren't going to be parked in those back yards," he said.

Supervisors list outside sources of 1986 income

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — Four county supervisors had outside sources of income during 1986 despite nearly doubling their government pay over the last two years, according to financial disclosure statements filed this week.

Board Chairman John Joyner of Big Bear was the only one of the five supervisors to report no income last year, although he has a 25 percent interest in the Club Goldmine resort partnership.

Supervisor Jon Mikels of Rancho Cucamonga listed receiving more than $10,000 as a co-owner of Mikels-Musser Citrus Partnership and a salary of more than $10,000 from the Pomona law firm of Young, Henrie, Humpries and Mason.

He also received between $1,001 and $10,000 for citrus produce sold last year, he reported.

However, Mikels and Supervisor Larry Walker of Chino only took office last December.

Supervisor Barbara Riordan reported receiving more than $10,000 last year from the Audiology Center of Redlands and more than $10,000 for rental of her Redlands Medical Center.

She also received between $1,001 and $10,000 in income from her BBR Partnership storage rental business.

Supervisor Robert Hammock of San Bernardino received income of more than $10,000 from Ankarapa Corp., a property management firm, and less than $10,000 from the rental of outdoor advertising land through his Western Empire Industries. Hammock also received income of less than $10,000 from investor Don Klurman.

Walker filed a statement last December indicating that he received less than $10,000 each from his own private law practice and Lonestar Corp., a real estate management firm.

Walker said he will only receive a small amount of income from his law practice this year, as he wraps up some cases.

County voters approved Measure K in 1985, allowing the supervisors to raise their salaries from $24,844 to $32,083 that year and then to $40,272 on Dec. 1, 1986.

The annual disclosure statements filed this week also show that supervisors continue to receive gifts.

Supervisors Hammock, Riordan, Joyner and Mikels all received food baskets last December worth between $125 and $200 from the Galstain family real estate trust in Glendale.

Hammock also received the use of a car from San Bernardino developer Frank Dominguez. He valued the use of the car at $200.

Mikels also received two tickets, worth $150, to the Christmas meeting of the San Bernardino/Riverside Disposal Association.

Supervisor Riordan listed receiving a room and dinner worth $200 from the bond underwriting firm of E.F. Hutton last December. Another bond underwriter, Miller and Schroeder Financial Inc., provided Riordan with room and dinner worth $200 last August.

People who care help woman fight limp

By Suzanne Sproul

Walking was a frustrating necessity for 21-year-old Hilda Arias.

A childhood bout with polio when she was 6 months old left the Ontario resident's right leg shortened and difficult to use. And she thought she would spend her life compensating for her disability.

But because a handful of people who cared, Arias may one day walk without her limp. She has been examined and local doctors are determining if she should wear a brace to correct her problem.

"I kept watching Hilda coming in and out of class all the time and I thought there must be something that could be done to help her. I mentioned it to our principal and the ball got rolling," said Betty Fellows, who helps teach Arias English in adult classes within the Chino Unified School District.

Through the efforts of several school district employees, the Chino Rotary Club, a Chino doctor and Orthomedics-Boyer in Pomona, the pros and cons of Arias' leg condition and possible treatment is being discussed.

Sam Burton, district director of adult education and Chino Rotary Club member, approached Dr. Mitchell Youngblood at Chino Community Hospital about examining Arias.

"I'm the chairman of the hardship and disability committee for the Rotary. We have a yearly project to help people in need. We have funds set aside to help. I found out about Hilda and the Rotary decided to help.

"We try and help out in the community wherever we can," Burton said.

Youngblood then referred the case to George Boyer, registered orthotist. Boyer said Monday Arias may not need a brace at this time. He will discuss her case with the woman's doctors.

"She may be a candidate for a brace down the line, though," he said.

Originally, physicians treating

Arias suggested possibly fitting her with a brace in hopes of stretching her Achilles tendon and straightening her leg.

"When I mentioned having someone look at her leg, Hilda was of course very frightened, but I think she is happy that it is being done," Fellows said.

"There is not much pain, but I was worried about having something done to my leg," Arias said.

"I can't believe I'm so lucky," Arias said shaking her head and smiling.

Street sign fiasco confuses city officials and residents

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A Caltrans employee was just following the rules when he ordered many of the street signs taken down along two of Upland's major thoroughfares.

But in a bureaucratic oversight, he forgot to tell the city, which began receiving calls the afternoon of March 27 from residents of streets that had lost their signs, said Mike Hudson, Upland's capital projects engineer.

Caltrans removed the street signs perched above stop signs along 16th and 19th streets because it is against a state law, according to R.H. Karns, maintenance engineer for the agency.

But it was a law Upland never heard of, Hudson said, adding that some of the signs along 19th Street east of Mountain and 16th Street west of Mountain — which make up the state route — had been there for 20 years.

After a letter from City Engineer Fred Blanchard, Caltrans responded with an apology for not notifying the city and an assertion that Caltrans was in the right even though the city owned the poles sporting both its street signs and the Caltrans-owned stop signs.

The letter stated that because of state law the agency "cannot tolerate this mixing of signs."

The story does have a happy ending, however.

Hudson said Caltrans returned the signs in fairly good shape. City employees began putting the signs up Friday afternoon and were to continue to work overtime through Saturday until all were installed, he said.

Because Caltrans refuses to let the city put the signs back on its own poles with the stop signs, the state agency is providing new poles, he said.

Caltrans will also refund the city for the approximately 100 hours of labor it will take to replace the signs, Hudson added. At approximately $20 an hour, the bill could run up to $2,000.

Residents of the temporarily unidentified streets contacted Friday expressed surprise and dismay at their predicament.

"I haven't noticed. I know where I live," said H. R. Burnett at his home on the unidentified Danube Way off 19th Street, noting that the taxpayers will be picking up the tab for the incident. "Doesn't that just gripe you? We'll have to get a hold of him (the Caltrans employee)."

Another Carmel Circle East resident said that he hadn't noticed the missing street sign, but remembered that he had had to flag down an attorney trying to find his home to deliver documents last week.

"When I saw him coming the wrong way I took it to be his own stupidity," he said. "I didn't know the sign was missing."

Young woman denies slaying foster child

By Rob L. Wagner

POMONA — A young woman tearfully told a Pomona Superior Court jury Monday that she did not kill an 18-month-old foster child left in her care.

Betty Loretta White, 20, of Pomona, denied killing Carlos Salas but admitted beating him "two or three days" before his June 30, 1986 death.

White took the witness stand before Judge Alfonso M. Bazan in her own defense to describe the events leading up to the foster child's death.

But the defendant's testimony contradicted a tape-recorded confession obtained by Pomona police detectives and played in court earlier. In the interview conducted the day of the toddler's death, White admitted beating the child to death.

In response to investigators' questions, White indicated during the interview that the beating took place the night before the death.

But under cross-examination by Deputy District Attorney Hyatt Seligman, White denied beating the child on June 29.

In a soft and sometimes barely audible voice, White described how the boy "hollered and screamed" during most of the night on June 29. She said she attempted to calm the child by patting him but was unsuccessful.

"I have a slow mind," she told the jury at one point. "I'm not just saying that. I'm serious."

The defendant broke down and cried when Seligman slammed his fist on the counsel table and asked her what she was thinking about when she caused bruises two inches deep on the boy.

Defense attorney Roger Whitenhill then asked for a brief recess so his client could regain her composure.

After the recess, White admitted that she kept hitting the child to make him obey her commands.

Attorney challenges search warrant at pre-trial hearing

T&A Video's attorney challenged the Upland Police Department's search warrant last week at a pre-trial hearing on charges that store clerks sold obscene material, Deputy District Attorney Lyle Scollon said.

Employee Roy Castro Garcia was charged with one count of distributing obscene material and one count of offering obscene material for sale during the Jan. 9 raid of Upland's only adult entertainment business. Fellow employee Brad Allen was also charged with offering obscene material for sale.

Police seized books, films and other sexually-oriented material at the store at 2121 W. Foothill Blvd. after an undercover investigation lasting more than a year.

The hearing will be before a judge only and Diamond will be required to submit his arguments beforehand, Scollon said. He said he is confident that the search warrants will be upheld.

The April trial was tentatively postponed until June 4, Scollon said.
